Question 1

Total Marks (out of 3)	Comments
0	The graph is not about screen time. They interpreted the graph and gave their opinion about the relationship between anxiety and depression and work, which is not the question. No creditworthy material.

Question 2

Total Marks (out of 6)	Comments
5	Although the beginning of the response is not well focused on the question, the data is well analysed, showing very good understanding. Conclusion lacks development as they did not give the implication of 'scores in the off-screen group is shifted to the right'

Question 3

Total Marks (out of 6)	Comments
4	The considerations of reflexivity and data recording are relevant and focused but they are not appropriately explained in the context of the given research.

Question 4

Total Marks (out of 15)	Comments
10	There were 3 sources interpreted and linked to the claim. However, knowledge was not detailed and was often anecdotal. One study included but not used as support for any source. There is some discussion of the claim but the evidence of critical thinking is partially developed. Conclusion is supported with evidence. The response indicates some understanding of the demands of the question. Knowledge and understanding relevant to the claim is limited or of marginal relevance. There is limited discussion of the extent to which the claim is valid. (6) The response contains critical analysis, although this analysis lacks development. Relevant knowledge is used to interpret two or more of the sources to support the discussion of the claim. (10-12)

	• There is some discussion of different points of view. The response argues to a conclusion that is consistent with the arguments presented.(10-12)
